A Message From Leadership

Dear Friends and Partners,

Thank you for your support of the Loma Linda University Children's Hospital and Foundation over the past year. Your generosity and belief in our mission make a profound difference for the children and families who rely on us for healing, hope, and compassionate care.

Throughout this year, we have been reminded that progress often begins with a simple wish — a wish for better health, renewed strength, and a brighter future. Because of your support, those wishes are transformed into real outcomes: innovative treatments, expanded services, and moments of comfort during some of life's most challenging times.

Guided by our Stronger Together campaign, we remain focused on strengthening pediatric outpatient care and improving access to critical services. Plans for our Children's Health Specialty Clinic will bring essential programs together in one location — improving coordination, easing the patient experience, and advancing our ability to deliver exceptional care. We also continue to make innovative strides in pediatric oncology, investing in new technologies and treatments that offer real promise for our young patients and their families.

These advancements are rooted in our commitment to excellence and compassion. The national recognition we have received — including being named among the best children's hospitals by U.S. News & World Report and the Leapfrog Group — reflects the extraordinary dedication of our clinical teams and the faithful support of our community.

We are deeply grateful for your partnership. Together, we are not only meeting today's needs but imagining what is possible for the future of children's health.

With our sincere appreciation,
Peter Baker and Rachelle Bussell

Stronger together CAMPAIGN

OUR COMMUNITY | OUR MISSION | OUR NEXT STEPS

Opening Doors to Better Care

The next phase of pediatric care is taking shape, thanks to your partnership.

New clinic coming soon! Opening soon, the Children's Health Specialty Clinics building will bring a wide range of pediatric services together in one dedicated space, designed entirely around the needs of children and families. As care needs have grown across the region, services have expanded into multiple locations. This new facility changes that experience, creating a centralized home where services are more connected, coordinated, and accessible.

The five-story, 105,000-square-foot building will support more than 75,000 patient visits each year. It will house specialties including cardiology, neurology, gastroenterology, pediatric surgery, speech therapy, immunology, and more, all working together in a setting built to encourage collaboration and continuity of care.

Inside, care teams will have shared spaces to coordinate treatment plans and align around each child's needs. This team-based approach is rooted in a deeper commitment to whole person care — caring not only for a child's medical condition, but also their emotional and social well-being.

A community-created mosaic, made up of thousands of individual drawings, will welcome families as a visible reminder that they are surrounded by compassion, encouragement, and support.

"Your generosity is helping us reshape pediatric specialty care at Loma Linda University Children's Hospital. By bringing services together in one dedicated location, we are creating a more connected, coordinated, and family-centered experience for children and families across our region, making care easier to access and better aligned around each child's needs," said Brett Walls, Vice President, Ambulatory Services.

New Frontiers in Pediatric Cancer Care

Progress in childhood cancer care is accelerating, and your support is part of that momentum.

At Loma Linda University Children's Hospital, new approaches are expanding what is possible for children diagnosed with cancer. CAR T-cell therapy, a breakthrough treatment that uses a patient's own immune system to identify and destroy cancer cells, is now being utilized for our pediatric patients.

Introduced in 2024, this therapy offers new options for patients whose cancers have returned or have not responded to other treatments. In many cases, it is a one-time treatment, bringing renewed hope to families who may be facing limited options.

This progress is part of a larger effort to advance pediatric cancer care through thoughtful innovation and specialized expertise. Children facing cancer have unique needs, and their care requires approaches designed specifically for growing bodies and developing systems.

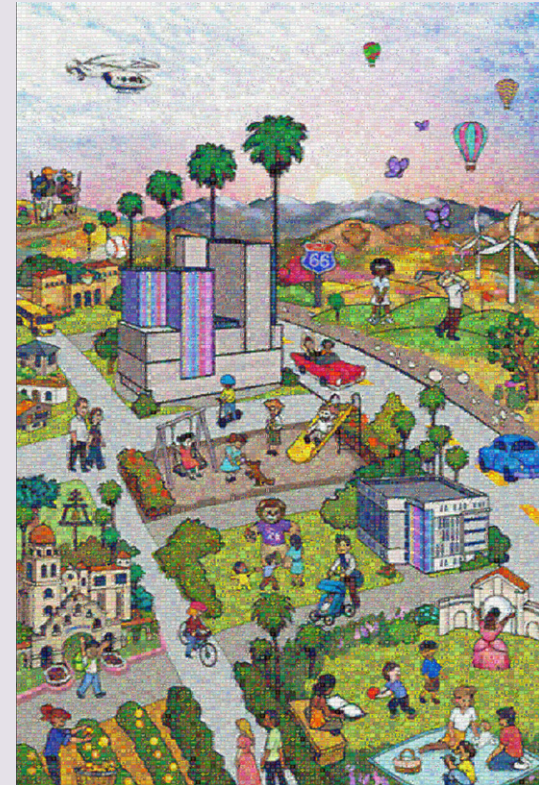

By investing in advanced therapies like CAR T-cell therapy, the Children's Hospital is expanding access to treatments that are more personalized for young patients. These efforts ensure that children facing complex diagnoses can receive leading-edge care close to home, surrounded by the support of a dedicated pediatric team.

"Your support has allowed the Children's Hospital to invest in the development of CAR T-cell, and other cell therapies, to treat children with cancer. Because of you, children are now being cured of cancer at Loma Linda who would otherwise go on to die of cancer. There is no greater impact!", said Mark Reeves, MD, PhD, Director of the LLU Cancer Center.

Building a Mural of Community and Hope

Rendering of mosaic made from pieces submitted by people of all ages across our community and will be displayed in our new Children's Health Specialty Clinics Building.

A Breakthrough for Young Hearts

You Advance Innovative Heart Care

At Loma Linda University Children's Hospital, children facing serious heart conditions are being given new possibilities — thanks to you. Your support helps care teams pursue advanced approaches that can change the course of a child's future.

For 12-year-old Ymiliano Hernandez, the journey has been anything but simple. Born with a rare heart condition, he needed major surgeries early in life just to keep his heart working. Years later, an infection damaged his heart valves, and he was facing yet another complex operation.

But this time, his care team saw a different way forward.

Led by cardiothoracic surgeons Anees Razzouk, MD, and Randall Fortuna, MD, the team performed Southern California's first pediatric partial heart transplant. During the 15-hour procedure, instead of using artificial materials, the surgical team replaced the damaged parts of Ymiliano's heart with living donor tissue, giving his heart the ability to function more naturally.

For children like Ymiliano, this approach makes a meaningful difference. Traditional valve replacements often wear out over time, leading to repeat surgeries. Other options can require lifelong medication, which comes with its own challenges. This newer approach offers the possibility of a longer-lasting solution — one that can grow along with the child.

Following surgery, early results showed Ymiliano's heart working as if he had been born without the defect. It was a powerful step forward in his journey.

This kind of innovation is only possible because of generosity. In partnership with OneLegacy and a selfless donor family, this procedure became a reality. And, it may open the door for more children to receive this type of care in the future.

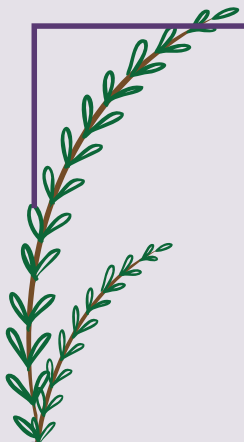

Because of you, breakthroughs like this are not just ideas. They are changing lives.

Your support makes it possible to pursue new approaches, invest in leading-edge care, and give children like Ymiliano the chance for a healthier future.

First Infant to Infant Heart Transplant

You Keep this Legacy Alive

Forty years ago, a four-day-old baby arrived at Loma Linda University Children's Hospital with a heart that could not sustain his life. Eddie "Baby Moses" Anguiano became the first infant in the world to survive a human-to-human heart transplant.

What happened in that operating room changed pediatric medicine, and it did not happen by accident.

With the support of our community, we were ready 40 years ago, and we remain ready today — equipped with specialized programs, advanced technology, and expert physicians for the most complex cases.

Today, Eddie is 40 years old and still living with the same transplanted heart. His life is a daily reminder of what becomes possible when children have access to leading-edge care close to home.

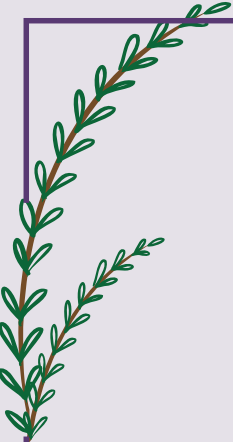

Your generosity helps ensure that when the next critically ill child arrives, our team is ready with the expertise, equipment, and compassion families are counting on.

Because of you, more children are growing up, celebrating milestones, and living full lives.

Saving the Smallest Lives

You Help More Babies Come Home

Born far too soon and way too small, Noah faced overwhelming odds at birth. He struggled to breathe, developed serious complications, and needed a feeding tube to survive.

At Loma Linda University Children's Hospital in the Small Baby Unit — where care is specialized for the tiniest and most fragile infants — Noah had a dedicated team, supported by your generosity, ready to work alongside him. With vigilant, compassionate care, baby Noah began to slowly grow stronger.

After five months in the NICU, Noah was finally stable enough to come home for the first time in his life. He still required the use of supplemental oxygen and a feeding tube, but he could sleep in his own crib.

Sommer Mass, Noah's mom, felt constant anxiety about keeping him alive at home. But with continued hospital visits, physical therapy, and nutrition support, she realized that Noah's future was bright, and one that she and Noah's dad could look forward to.

Today, Noah is a walking, talking, playful two-year-old. A life once filled with so much uncertainty is now full of opportunity and possibility.

Nearly 95% of premature babies cared for go home. With Loma Linda University Children's Hospital NICU and Small Baby Unit caring for more micro preemies like Noah than any other center along the West Coast, those outcomes are made possible because of continued generosity.

for Noah and so many others like him.

Champions for Children

The future of children's health is blooming through our local business supporters.

The Corporate Champions for Children program unites Loma Linda University Children's Hospital Foundation with businesses and support organizations dedicated to improving children's healthcare. These committed groups pledge to gift the foundation at least $5,000 annually, often employing creative fundraising strategies such as donating a portion of sales or facilitating register donations. A Champion can also sponsor an event we host such as our annual Cops for Kids Fly-In or our KFrogger 4 Kids Radiothon. This is a great way to help us with expenses and be highlighted in the community. These vital funds directly support the expansion of essential care for the 1.2 million children served within the region. These businesses that leverage their customers and marketing funds are making a tangible difference. We are proud to recognize these Corporate Champions for their dedication to our shared mission of building a healthier future for the children of the Inland Empire. Walter's Children's Charity Classic

A true legacy, fueling growth for 30 years

For three decades, the Walter's Children's Charity Classic has been a powerful force for healing at Loma Linda University Children's Hospital. What began as a shared vision has grown into one of the most impactful philanthropic traditions supporting our hospital, and has raised nearly $7 million for critical programs, services, equipment, and resources that directly benefit children and families in need.

Thirty years ago, the Classic began as a true grassroots effort. Cathy and Steve Kienle of Walter's Auto Group, founded Walter's Children's Charity Classic and went door to door seeking auction items, rallying friends, local businesses, and trusted vendors to support a cause close to their hearts. With determination, creativity, and a willingness to figure things out along the way, they built the foundation for what would become an enduring community tradition.

Hosted lovingly by Cathy and Steve, the annual golf tournament grew in to far more than a day on the course. It is the culmination of months of thoughtful planning, community partnership, and dedication. Each year, golfers and supporters are welcomed into an experience filled with camaraderie and purpose. From fun, interactive challenges throughout the day to an evening banquet featuring remarkable silent and live auction items, this beloved event is anticipated all year by its golfers and guests.

That growth was on full display at the 2025 Classic, their 30th and final event. Fast forward from its humble beginnings to a seamless day of golf and entertainment, the event welcomed a remarkable community of loyal sponsors and supporters and raised an extraordinary $400,000 in a single day.

The heart of the event is always the moment when a patient family shares their journey.

These powerful stories remind every attendee why they are there and reinforce the profound impact of their generosity. Guests leave inspired, connected, and deeply moved.

We are profoundly grateful to the Kienle family, Walter's Auto Group, and the Walter's Children's Charity Classic Committee for their extraordinary leadership and steadfast support. Their generosity has fueled growth at Loma Linda University Children's Hospital, strengthened vital programs, and inspired countless others to give. Through their vision and dedication, the Walter's Children's Charity Classic has created a legacy that has changed lives and brought hope to children and families today and for generations to come.
